Lemmons reported on her recent training opportunity with EveryLibrary, a political action committee that stands as a resource to protect U.S. libraries. At the training, Lemmons met other Board members and library workers from different states, engaged in talks about library advocacy and activism, as well as learned talking points to use in recent legislation testimonies.

The Board discussed what can better prepare Idaho libraries for future, harmful legislation. In connection to their discussion, Dorr made the Board aware of May’s policy review involving collection development.

The framework highlights goals and success statements for the previously presented strategic priorities. Lewis also shared how this framework will be measured. She then expanded on each strategic priority with their goals and success statements. Trustees and Councilmember Hallyburton provided feedback on the goals and success statements and discussed how the new framework acknowledges findings and concerns from the strategic plan’s phase 1.
